

The heart is full of sadness and anger. I used water color in blue to create the tear flowing down and the eye on the blue side is tearing to represent sadness. The other side is red and yellow. The bleeding eye is the symbol of violence and anger.

My Heart Garden is a reflection of forgiveness and Peace represented in a positive, colorful piece. In Commemoration of those Angels that passed away due to the Residential School System.

Therline Pees.

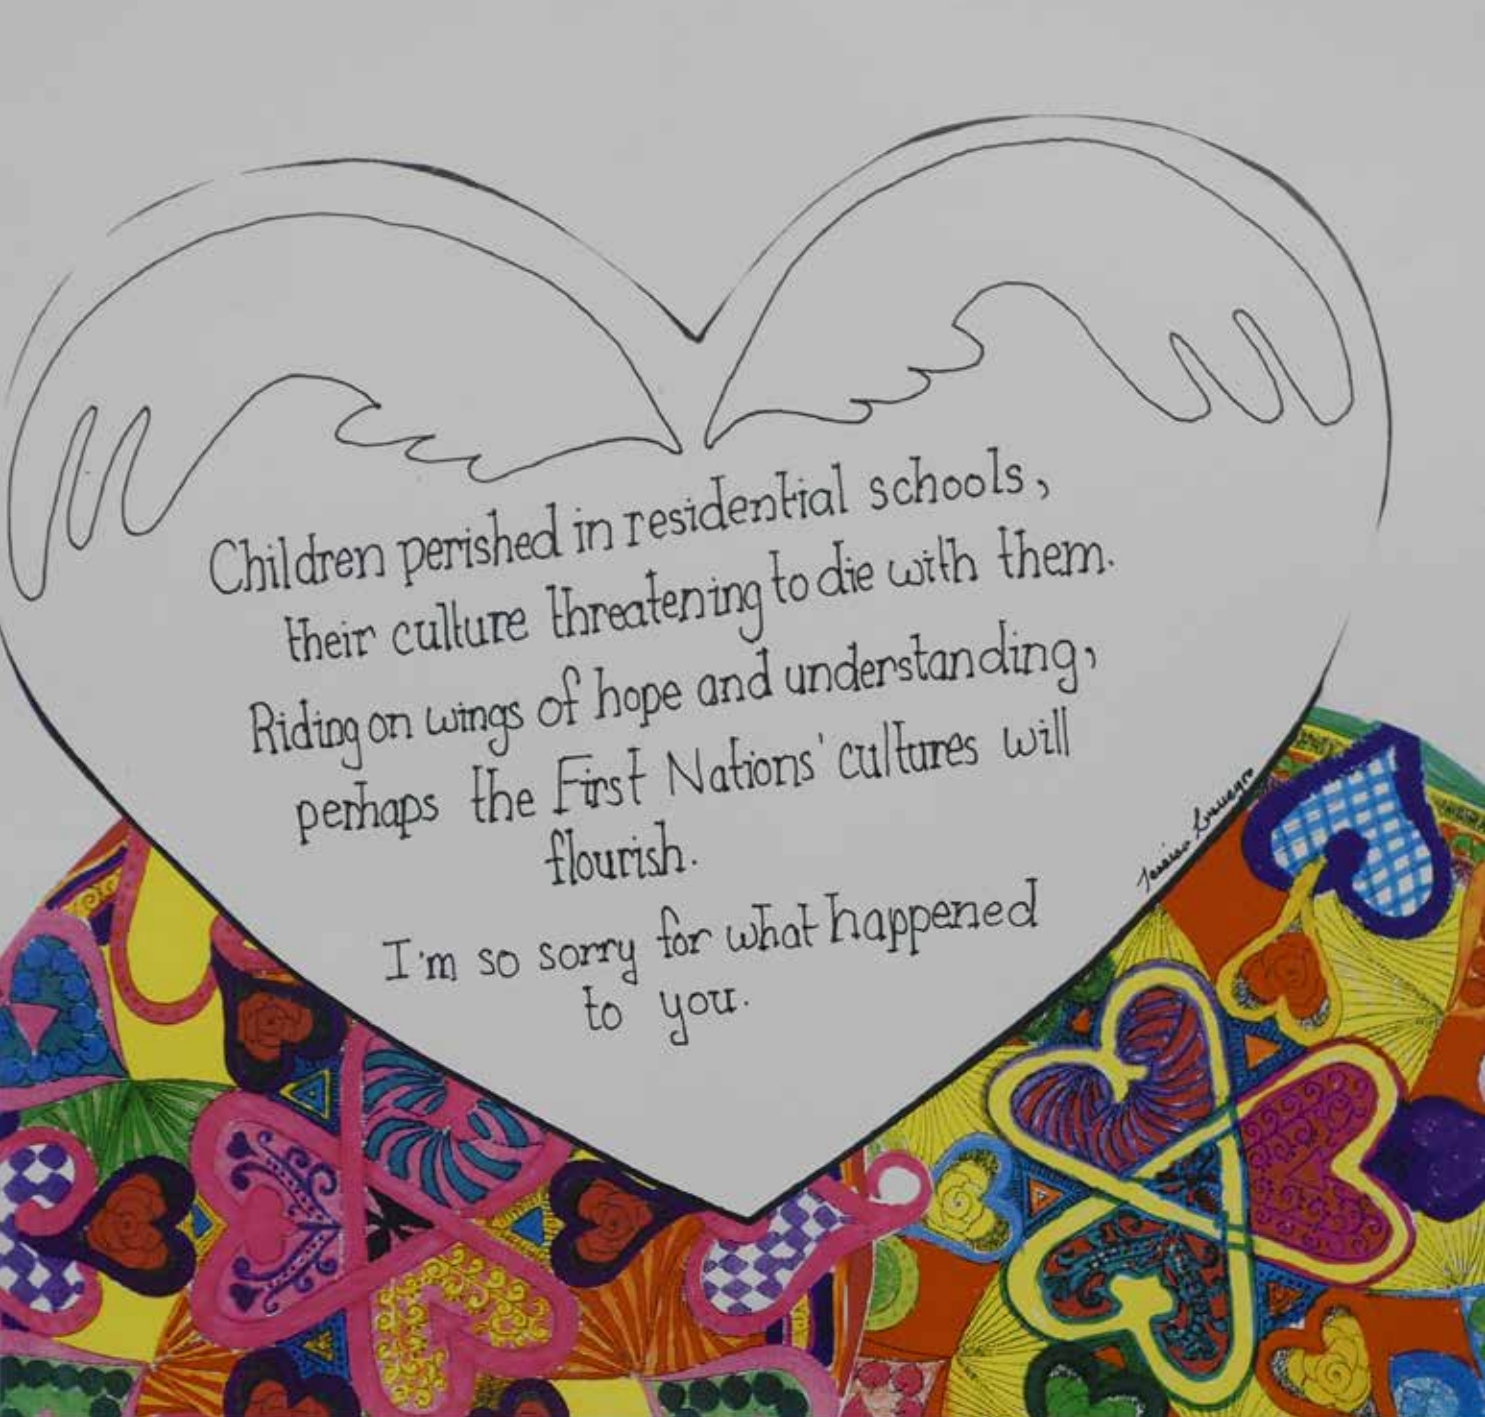

I draw a garden with a big beautiful tree in it because that's where I hope those children be. A beautiful and peacefull place, where they can play with eachother and learn and be happy. In my opinion eachone of those flowers on the tree represent one of those innocent children.

Children perished in residential schools,
their culture threatening to die with them.
Riding on wings of hope and understanding, perhaps the First Nations' cultures will flourish.

I'm so sorry for what happened to you.

Residential School is an inhumanly cruelty in this world, it should have had never happened in this world. By drawing a heart created with a pair of different shaded hands, it represents the equality in different races and how diversity should be acceptable. Humans were all originated from central Africa. We just happen to evolve into different appearance features living in different countries. Why are we treating our own kinds differently? I hope, with my drawing of peace and love, the society learnt how to treat humans equally in the future generations.
